CITY TRUSTEES

Bond Issue Sold—Portion of Broadway to be Widened—Water Service Discussed

All members present. The order of business was changed and bids opened for furnishing material and fixtures for the electric lighting department, the same being referred to Manager Lynch.

Bids for the $16,000 bond issue were received from Torrance Marshall and Co. offering par, accrued interest and a premium of $382. After reference the bid was accepted. Mr. J. F. McIntyre appeared before the board and stated that J. P. Shropshire had prepared a deed to the city of a strip of land 13 feet wide on the north side of Broadway from Glendale avenue to Everett street which he was willing to convey if the city would put in sidewalk and curb and make necessary street improvements on the said strip. This will make that portion of the street correspond to the west portion of that thoroughfare in width. The property owners on the south side had also agreed to contribute a certain sum for said improvement. It was agreed that the city pay $150 from the general fund for this improvement and the remainder to be made up by property owners and the deed to be accepted.

Communication from Verdugo Springs Water company in reference to fire hydrants referred to city attorney.

Reports of different officials received and referred to different committees to report on later.

A communication was received from May Fischer, 121 S. Broad street, Los Angeles, requesting permission to construct sidewalk by private contract on Lot 22 Lomita Park, referred to city engineer who reported it was too late as work had been commenced. The city attorney presented a written opinion as to powers of the city to regulate service, equipment facilities and extensions of public service utilities, to the effect that this city not having a charter is powerless to do so, that coming within the powers of the state board. A protest was received against the opening and widening of Orange street, referred to the city engineer, who advised that it did not represent the required frontage necessary to stop proceedings. Trustee Lane reported that he had been unable to find any place where the garbage could be dumped.

Trustee Tower reported that the cost of material for hydrants would be $11 each. The question of right of city to connect with pipes of water companies for fire hydrants was referred to the city attorney. The Park Commission made a report, which was referred to committee of the whole. The report was adverse to the Verdugo Park proposition on the grounds that the location was remote and the price excessive. Recommended the block bounded by Broadway, Cedar, Belmont and Fifth streets, at a cost of $25,250. For the west side the committee recommended a portion of the Stepper block bounded by Broadway, Fifth, Central and Orange streets, at about the same price, recommending a bond issue for $50,000 for the two sites.

Dr. Chase, health officer, reported two cases of measles and a case suspected of being hydrophobia, the latter now being investigated. He was granted a week's leave of absence. The manager of the lighting department recommending acceptance of the bid of the Standard Underground Cable Co. and of Kierulff & Co. for appliances and supplies for the department, and action was taken accordingly. It appearing that the water service in some parts of the city is very poor—the city attorney was requested to confer with the companies and see what can be done, otherwise the matter to be referred to the state board of public utilities.

The Glendale Sanitarium last Sunday evening was the scene of a very pretty wedding ceremony, when Miss Mabel A. Marvin, daughter of Elder C. F. Marvin, was married to Mr. Robert McKeag. The ceremony took place in the large dining room, which was decorated in white and green for the occasion. Elder Sartee of Loma Linda, who had acted in the capacity of teacher to both the young people, said the necessary words that joined them legally together, and added others happily fitting to the occasion. About two hundred persons witnessed the ceremony, a large number of them being personal friends of the interested parties. There was special music furnished, principally by classmates of the young people; notable were some Hawaiian melodies rendered by two of the teachers, formerly of Honolulu.

Mr. and Mrs. McKeag are both graduate nurses of the Loma Linda School, and look forward to going to Hawaii in the near future to start the sanitarium work there. Mr. McKeag being formerly a resident of the islands.

Miss Jane A. Hawk of 1822 Santa Cruz avenue, Los Angeles, entertained at a charmingly planned sewing bee on Tuesday. Glendale guests were Miss George Duffet, Miss Ruth Brown and Miss Ruth Pierce.

WATER COMMITTEE HOLDS MEETING

Owens River Water and Mr. Brand's Proposition Discussed—Recommend No Action Now

Saturday evening the water committee met at the city hall, nearly all of the members and other citizens being present. Mr. Blackburn reported having again interviewed the Los Angeles water commissioners, but the latter were not yet prepared to make any definite proposition, when they did so he believed the price of Owens river water would be fixed so near cost, that Glendale would be able to sell it to consumers at about the figure prevailing in Los Angeles. Chairman Watson, in absence of Mr. Emery, reported that the committee appointed to get a price from owners of Verdugo Canon water, had no made any progress, but thought they would be able to report something definite when the committee met again. The matter of frequent picnics at Verdugo Park around the sources of our water supply was brought up with possibilities of pollution, and the chairman stated that on all such occasions there was some one present to see that no such pollution occurred. The secretary read a report by Mr. Harry B. Lynch in regard to Mr. L. C. Brand's proposal to sell the Miradero Water Company to the city. Mr. Lynch on behalf of the city, and Mr. Arthur Campbell representing Mr. Brand, had arrived at a valuation of the property, the sum being $28,526.19. In addition to this the report included the following details:

Plant supplies at present 220 consumers, of which 112 are within the city limits of Glendale, 108 outside. There is covered cement reservoir with capacity of 750,000 gallons. The pipe system consists of 33,543 feet of pipe, of which 15,543 is four-inch screw casing, 10,727 feet two-inch ditto, 5655 feet eight-inch riveted steel, and 2789 feet four-inch steel casing.

The valuation of the screw pipe is put in at 90 per cent, and the steel casing at 75 per cent of its original cost, all being in good condition. The plant carries with it 490 1/4 shares of Verdugo Canon water which at present supplies the wants of the system. The offer also carries an agreement for pumped water at two and a half cents an inch per hour whenever such excess is required. This is at the rate of 2.88 cents per 100 cubic feet.

Mr. Lynch estimates that by fixing rates at $1.00 for 800 cubic feet to consumers within the city, and at $1.25 per 800 cubic feet to outsiders, the plant should yield a revenue of $4400 a year while interest and operating expenses will amount to about $2200 the first year. It would be necessary to pay out probably $1000 a year for new extensions and connections, this calculation being based upon an increase of fifty consumers a year. The interest would decrease $300 every year while new connections should increase the income about $750 a year.

Mr. Lynch answered a number of questions in regard to the matter. He expressed the belief that the city if bonded heavily for Owens river water would find it difficult to compete successfully with existing water companies, the most of which are practically clear of debt and could furnish water cheaper than the city can afford to. Mr. E. A. Bayley, a resident of Glendale and connected with the Los Angeles water commission, was called upon and gave considerable information in regard to the Owens river water and the plans of the commission as far as formulated.

In the estimate prepared by the commission, the cost of the water to Glendale in the first instance would be about $130,000 for a distribution system that would bring it to Glendale, while a distributing system throughout the city would cost $150,000, making a total of $280,000. This would give the city of Glendale no right to the water, which could be procured by lease for the space of fifteen years at a price based upon the actual cost of the water, which Mr. Bayley estimated at $1250 an inch at the San Fernando reservoir. This figure is reached by assuming that the quantity of water delivered at San Fernando will amount to 20,000 inches, and the total cost of the work at $23,000,000. Mr. Lynch called attention to the fact that this total cost, representing the bond issue only, should be added about $3,000,000 for interest; this would bring the cost up to about $1400 an inch. On another basis Mr. Bayley estimated the cost per acre at about $17.50 a year. He read copy of proposed contract, one of the principal features of which is a clause requiring the lessee to use all the water contracted for. Both the Owens river and the Brand propositions were debated at considerable length. Messrs. Emery, Woodberry, Tower, Watson, Sherer and others favored the proposition to buy the Miradero Company while those advocating a policy of delay were Messrs. White, Lane, Flower, Blackburn, Letts and others, the latter proving to be in the majority when Mr. White offered a resolution expressing it as a sense of the meeting that the city secure options from water owners and that nothing definite be done in the matter until other propositions are received, when all may be considered at the same time.

This motion was adopted and the committee adjourned to call of the chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Nance of St. Louis were the guests of Mrs. W. K. Russell. They left Tuesday for San Francisco.

POSTAL CONDITIONS

Chamber of Commerce Appoints Committee—Postmaster Harrison Promises Improvement

At a recent meeting of the chamber of commerce, a committee consisting of W. B. Kirk, Frank Chase and J. C. Sherer was appointed to confer with Mr. Harrison, postmaster of Los Angeles, in reference to the situation in Glendale and vicinity regarding mail delivery. Previously the matter had been agitated in the columns of the NEWS, calling attention specifically to the necessity for enlarging the free delivery territory and providing for more prompt service within the territory already served. The appointment of the committee alluded to above was preceded by the adoption of the following resolution:

Whereas, The postal service in Glendale has not kept pace with the growth of our city, the office force being no larger than when the receipts were only one-third or one-half of what they are at the present time, thus causing unnecessary delay in the delivery of mail and in the other parts of the service; and

Whereas, Our manager, Mr. Robertson, a faithful and conscientious public servant, is compelled to labor for long hours after his work is supposed to be finished, in order to keep up with the work at all; and

Whereas, In parts of the sections of our newly annexed territory not at all remote from our postoffice, our citizens have no carrier service, but are compelled to wait for their mail by rural delivery route; therefore be it Resolved, By the Chamber of Commerce of the City of Glendale that we urge the postal authorities in Los Angeles to look into this matter at once, and to correct these troubles, and that a committee of the chamber be appointed by the president to wait upon them and personally urge this greatly needed improvement of the service.

Tuesday morning last, two members of the committee, accompanied by Mr. F. L. Muhleman, waited upon Postmaster Harrison by appointment. The committee was pleased to learn that Mr. Harrison was fully informed in regard to the situation and at the time of the interview a special agent was at work on the matter getting ready his report for the department at Washington. He informed the committee that by August first at the latest he thought authority would be given to put into effect an enlarged area of delivery, the plan contemplated doing away with the present "R. D. No. 5" delivery which is in operation very unsatisfactorily around the edges of Glendale and Tropic.

WEDDING IN JUNE.

A charmingly pretty home wedding was held at eight o'clock on the evening of June 27 when Miss Hazel Dawes and Mr. Rufus R. Shrode were united in marriage at the home of Mrs. Anna L. Smith on Riverdale drive. The ceremony was performed by Rev. O. H. L. Mason, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Long Beach. The happy couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Gus Murphy of Los Angeles, Little Miss Leone Larsen, a tiny cousin of the bride, acted as flower girl and scattered blossoms in the pathway, Evelyn Shrode, small daughter of the groom, was a demure but efficient ring bearer. The pretty ceremony was solemnized beneath an elaborate canopy of ferns and marguerites. Quantities of Shasta Daisies and magnolia blossoms made the receiving rooms a bower of beauty. Following the ceremony a reception was held, during which the happy couple were greeted and congratulated by their many friends present. After the wedding supper was prettily served, Mr. and Mrs. Shrode left for their future home in Artesia. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Dawes of Long Beach and is a former teacher of the Atlantic Avenue school of that city. The groom is a resident of Artesia, where he possesses many friends.

THE SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION

Enthusiastic and Interesting Meeting Held at San Diego. Editors Guests of the City

The members of the Southern California Editorial association have just returned from attending the twenty-fourth annual meeting of that body, held this year at San Diego, where they have been for four days the guests of the public bodies and citizens of that hospitable city.

About one hundred editors and their wives left Los Angeles Thursday morning on the Santa Fe train, filling a special car. The orange and walnut groves of the rich section traversed by the road furnished additions to the party from the rapidly growing towns along the line, representatives coming in from San Bernardino valley at Orange Junction, and the towns of Anaheim, Santa Ana, Orange, Norwalk, Compton, Whittier and Artesia as these places or their connecting stations were reached. A few imports from journalistic fields "back east," who passed over the route for the first time were by unanimous consent allowed to express admiration for the scenery, which appealed to them with all the charm of discovery, and the pathetic ruins of the mission at San Juan Capistrano as the train stopped in the rear of its ruined walls, brought up in the minds of all an unexpected tribute to the rapidly fading traces of a glorious past.

San Diego.

Arriving at San Diego, motor busses provided by the San Diego Sight-Seeing Company conveyed the members of the party to the U. S. Grant hotel, at which splendid caravanserie they were provided with quarters where they were made at home during their stay in the city. This hotel is one of the institutions of which the city is justly proud. It was completed about two years ago, is a splendid specimen of the modern reinforced concrete structure and cost when completely furnished nearly a million and a half dollars. It has five hundred rooms, roof gardens, a large ball room and assembly room, and one unique feature is a number of tent houses on the roof, which during the tourist season are well patronized by "open-air cranks" and semi-invalids. From the roof of the building, the eye takes in the splendid panorama of the city that is rapidly climbing and spreading over the nearby hills, the distant mountains, the bay and the ocean, a splendid panorama whose limit is only the natural range of vision. The San Diego that the visitor found a few years ago, "serene, indifferent of fate," waiting patiently and with a beautiful confidence on that future which her people felt was assured by the possession of a splendid harbor, a site of great natural beauty for city building and an unexcelled climate, has passed away, and to one who knew the place in that period, the change to the busy, and bustling of today, is almost pathetic. San Diego is wide awake, full of the restless fever for achievement which is typical of the great and growing empire of the Southwest and of the modernism of the twentieth century. But more than this, San Diego has with splendid courage taken upon itself a tremendous enterprise, the Panama-California Exposition (not the Panama-Pacific, please note) and is putting it through to a successful issue. As the exposition is to come off at the same time as the one in San Francisco, the efforts to make the affair unique and are searching the world for attractions that have hitherto not been found at world's fairs, desiring not to compete with San Francisco, but to present to the world "something different."

At the city park, where the exhibition is to be given, a great work is now going on. This park of 1400 acres on hill and canyon, was almost bare of anything but natural growth two years ago, but is being transformed rapidly by the planting of trees and shrubbery, until it is apparent that when the exposition opens in 1915 it will be a place of beauty, for the site is a commanding one where nature can be happily wedded to art. A million dollars' worth of bonds have recently been sold for the improvement of the water front where 80 acres are to be reclaimed and the city authorities believe that by leasing this land to industrial concerns a very satisfactory income will accrue to the city.

ENTERTAINED AT LEE HOME.

Some seventy-five guests enjoyed a delightful musical at the Lee residence on Cedar street last Friday evening when Miss Dorothy entertained in honor of her instructor, Clarence E. Krinbill, and his Glendale piano pupils. A program of exceptional merit was presented, each number being given in a manner to reflect great credit upon performer and instructor. Those on the program to play were Miss Dorothy Dow, Alva Spencer, Clara Pearson, Frank Hester, Anceal Martin, Lester Stallcup, Helen Ingledew, Violet and Leonard Stallcup, Mildred Elliott, Marie Maier and the hostess, Dorothy Lee, whose ability is well known.

Fort Rosecrans.

While the editors were in San Diego they received courtesies from Jack Dodge, the manager of the Isla Theater, and from Wm. Tompkins of the Empress, whose entertainments were free to the visitors. The managers of the Point Loma Ferry treated them to a ride on the bay Friday morning when the party was permitted to visit Fort Rosecrans and the members were shown through the various departments of the fortifications and witnessed a gun drill given for their special enlightenment. They were shown the great stores of ammunition, the 500-pound and the smaller projectiles, and the great ten-inch, thirty-ton guns on disappearing carriages commanding the harbor entrance and capable of doing fatal injury to a vessel anywhere in the ten-mile range. They were shown the mines kept in store and ready to be planted in the harbor when necessary and the method of placing and firing them were explained.

Point Loma.

Friday afternoon the editors were the guests of Mrs. Katherine Tingley at the Theosophical headquarters at Point Loma, where they enjoyed a fine concert furnished by a splendid orchestra and a perfectly trained chorus of young voices, and were shown through the institution in its varied departments, including the sumptuously furnished home of Madame Tingley with its rich treasures, some of them almost priceless, of old manuscripts and articles of rare value from all parts of the world. An elaborate and artistically served luncheon was spread under the trees, the ground carpeted with rich rugs, music playing softly near by, students in the costumes of different nations serving the guests with all the artistic touches possible in a place where art is supreme. After luncheon, about 7 o'clock, the guests were escorted to the wonderful Greek theater, erected at the head of a canyon opening out to the ocean, and were treated to a classical and uniquely beautiful production of "The Aroma of Athens." The theater itself is no doubt the superior of any of the open-air theaters of antiquity in artistic surroundings and detail, and the play, which is Madame Tingley's own arrangement, is an artistic production of great beauty.

Saturday morning autos were furnished by the chamber of commerce and citizens, and the visitors were taken out to Point Loma over one of the finest boulevards in the country, going as far as the old light house, erected in 1853 and abandoned two years ago for the new site on the beach below, past the National cemetery where the dead of the ill-fated Bennington are buried. Returning from Point Loma, there was a ride about the city and through the park.

The Business Session.

Saturday afternoon the business meeting of the association was held in the ball room of the U. S. Grant hotel. Charles E. Jones was elected president for another year; C. H. Randall, treasurer, and W. A. Rennie, secretary. There were reports by the officers and one by a special committee, paying a fine tribute to the memory of a pioneer of the association, C. H. McDivitt, who recently died. A number of short speeches were made and other business transacted. Saturday evening the editorial party were the guests of the chamber of commerce and the directors of the Panama-California Exposition, at a banquet in the Grant hotel, at which a number of speeches were made and some unique features in the way of entertainment were furnished the company.

LaJolla and Tent City.

Sunday the party entrained for La Jolla, guests of the Los Angeles and San Diego Beach railway. There the visitors frolicked on the sands, bathed in the cool Pacific, saw the wonders of the caves, the practical results achieved by San Diego's City Forester at the city farm, returning to the hotel for a sacred concert in the evening.

Monday the pleasures of Coronado Tent City were freely ours, and the return home refreshed and rejuvenated, was one of the pleasurable parts of this most pleasing outing.

CHAPTER II. A Guest at the Pines.

PRESENTLY I asked what accommodations were to be had at Oglethorpe.

"Mighty poor, mighty poor, sir—that is, if you stay in the town. But if you are going to be long in the vicinity you might get board in one of the farmhouses outside of the town."

I thanked him and then explained that I was a writer and that I was collecting material for a story.

"A book?" he said, showing great interest at once and carefully scanning my face through his spectacles.

"Yes," I answered, which was the truth at least, for I had suddenly conceived the idea of collecting data for a novel. For where else, I thought, could there be better characters and scenery than right here? My aged companion looked thoughtful for a moment and then said:

"May I ask if you have any references or if you know anybody in these parts?"

"I mentioned several persons within the state whom my father had known, and they seemed to satisfy him, for he continued:

"You are of a mind to accept my hospitality? We will be glad to put you up and to share what we have with you. I guess Bud would enjoy your company, and Ellen and Mary—Mary's my wife, you know—would make you welcome."

"It would be a great convenience to me," I said and thanked him. "For I know nothing of this country, and you seem to be very well acquainted."

"I ought to be," he said, "for my family has been in these parts since General Oglethorpe, that great philanthropist and friend of the poor, first came to Georgia. The last time he came to this country he made my grandfather's house his headquarters when on his way from Fort Augusta to Savannah. Just before the Revolution he sent my grandfather a portrait of himself in token of the esteem in which he held his father. He lived to see the colony he had planted become an independent state, you know, sir, and he seemed mighty proud of the record old Georgia made during the war of the Revolution. The Pines, as we call our home, was built just after his death, and his picture has the place of honor in it now. It is a sorry place since the Yankees came through here and used it as a stable, but we keep it with the hope that some day the fortunes of the family may go out of their eclipse and that some worthy son will arise to restore it to its former position of importance in the community. But what there is left you will be welcomed to my lad."

Before I could properly thank him the whistle blew and our train pulled into Oglethorpe. The colonel advanced and, calling out to an old negro, whom he addressed as Jefferson, ordered him to bring the wagon nearer, as there was a trunk to get.

"If I know'd yer had gists I'd sure have brought the coach,"

into Oglethorpe. The colonel advanced and, calling out to an old negro, whom he addressed as Jefferson, ordered him to bring the wagon nearer, as there was a trunk to get.

"If I know'd yer had gists, Mars George, I'd sure have brought the coach," said the old, darky, looking apologetically at the wagon he was on. The colonel told him that I was going to stay some time and that he "reckoned" I would know all they had soon and so he would not begin by offering excuses.

"By the way, sir," he said as we stepped off the platform. "I have not the pleasure of knowing your name, though you have heard mine often enough this morning." I had, indeed, overlooked that detail, or else felt indifferent to it, but I handed him my card, which he read carefully and then asked:

"I reckon you ain't any relation to the Palmers of Kentucky. I roomed with two men from that state of your name years ago when I was at Princeton."

I told the colonel that I was not from Kentucky, but thought there was some kinship. I had intended telling him that the families had never met and that in all probability the Kentucky Palmers would not know of me, but I did not finish my explanation, for as soon as I mentioned kinship he grasped my hand warmly and said:

"Then, sir, you can make yourself at home in my house as long as you care to, for there were never two finer fellows than those Palmer boys, even if they did join the Yankee army during the war. I tell you, sir, I am proud and happy to entertain one of their blood at the Pines. And now, Jefferson, drive fast, for we must let Miss Ellen know we have a guest."

The Pines was a distance of some five miles from the town limits. It was appropriately named, for after we entered the grounds we passed into a primordial forest of tall and stately pine trees. The long needles waved in the wind, and there was a mournful cadence in the branches, different from the song we hear in the northern forests. The ground was covered with pine straw, and it might have been falling there and ngathered for generations, so thickly did it seem to lie. We crossed a branch over which there had been built an old stone bridge, now covered with vines.

"That, sir, was built as a memorial to General Oglethorpe," said my old host, seeing my curiosity, for the bridge was out of all proportion to the size of the stream. "When the general paid his memorable visit to this place it was right there, sir, that he drew from his pocket a small flask and after offering my grandfather a drink took one himself. You must know, sir, that the great philanthropist was supposed to be a teetotaler and certainly never took a drink in the presence of any of his guests for fear of setting them a bad example. That little act shows an ordinary fellow could the great confidence and esteem in which he held my worthy progenitor."

"I was anxious to hear more of this episode, but feared to get the colonel started on what was evidently to him an important bit of family history and which I suspected strongly had become a hobby. 'Some day Ellen shall write him with you,' he added, 'and show you the inscriptions on it. You will find them interesting.'"

Ellen again. "I was beginning to feel the keenest anxiety to meet this Ellen and to wonder what she could be—half cock and half lady. I had begun to think from the little bits I had picked up, concerning her, during the day. We passed from the pine trees into a long avenue of cedars, and when we emerged from this the Pines in all its solitary and lonely grandeur stood before us, rich in coloring from the setting sun that bathed it in a crimson glow. As I looked at it in wonderment it might have been a dream out of the past that had taken shape and floated now across my vision. Its front and sides were flanked with colonial columns of the Doric type, and the low wings running at right angles to the body of the house were covered with vines which almost hid the low porch.

This porch was supported by diminutive columns of the same graceful curves. I was so moved by the beauty of the whole at first that I failed to note that some of the columns were on the point of falling and that others were crumbling to decay. The plaster had fallen from many of them, showing a dull red brick behind. But these evidences of decay gave an additional charm to the scene, augmenting its perfection as a whole and keeping it in perfect harmony with its owner and the neighborhood of that section. It seemed to typify the generation then living there and fighting against its own decay. I was awakened from my dreamy thought by hearing the colonel calling loudly for some one to get the horse. Presently there came from around one of the wings a little, half naked urchin, who said that Mrs. Turpin had gone to the Trif funeral, and that Miss Ellen was cooking the dinner, and that "Young Marsa" had not come from the fields.

"Then, tell Miss Ellen, Sappie, to put another finger in the pie, for I have brought a guest home with me. Now, sir," turning to me, "if you will come with me, I will show you your room and bid you make yourself at home."

We passed under the huge doorway and entered a large hall which was as wide as any room I could remember in my grandfather's house in New England. It was almost bare of furniture. There were two or more large mahogany sofas which had once been lined with black horsehair, but this latter was so much worn that the matting showed beneath it in places, and in others it was patched with bright colored calico and sometimes with pieces of faded silk. The colonel led me up a flight of stairs, bare of carpet, but clean and polished.

"You will be right over the billiard room," he said, opening a door which led into a beautifully lighted room on the east side, standing in the center of which was a large, canopied bed. "If you care for billiards," he continued, "I will wager that Ellen can give you ten points and beat you out. And now, sir, we have dinner at 6 o'clock, for Bud likes to have his dinner when he comes from the field instead of in the middle of the day, as he says he feels more like a gentleman. Until then, sit, I hope you rest well."

I had not asked the question before but now anticipated the courage to say:

"Colonel, there is one little thing I should like to have settled. Business is business, you know," I said, laughing, for I did not like the look of dignity he suddenly assumed at the mention of business. "In justice to the fact of us I ought to ask you how much will be my board by the week."

Had General Oglethorpe himself arisen to confront the colonel I do not think he could have shown more surprise than he did at my simple question. He drew himself up with a dignity which was truly commanding, and, speaking in a suppressed voice, he asked me:

"When have the Turpins adopted the custom of taking money from their guests, I beg you to tell me, sir? If you were not a kinsman of my dear friends, the Palmers, I would at once show you the door."

I stood covered with confusion. "I humbly beg your pardon if I have offended you, colonel, and I am greatly mortified to have so deeply wounded you, but until this moment I thought you had been kind enough to receive me as a boarder. I felt grateful enough for that, and you should not put me under obligations which I can never repay, and which I have no right to accept. But you yourself are somewhat to blame," I added quickly, for I saw that he was still deeply offended. "You told me that I might get board in one of the farmhouses, and immediately offered me the hospitality of your roof."

"The Turpins are not farmers, sir; they are planters, and if we have to cook our own meals we serve them with no less degree of hospitality than when a negro stood at each door at the beck and call of everybody in the room."

"Colonel Turpin, I hope you will forgive me my stupid blunder or else let me leave your house at once."

His face relaxed into a smile, and, extending his hand, he grasped mine. "As you say, lad, I am not blameless in the matter. But we are getting a little sensitive down here. And now forget all about it and, what is more, don't ever mention it to Ellen or to Bud, for they would think their old father had been lacking in dignity, else a mistake of this kind were impossible."

When he left me I felt a prey to regrets over my stupid blunder and, what seemed worse, my apparent deception concerning the relationship with the Kentucky Palmers. As long as I thought I was going to go to an inn of some kind or to pay my board I had not thought it worth while to explain the mistake into which the colonel had fallen. I felt it to be too late now to confess that in all likelihood there was no kinship at all or, if any, so remote as to form no ties of blood and certainly not to earn for me any consideration on that score. Feeling like a culprit, I threw myself on the bed, determined to leave the Pines at the first moment I could do so without offending my kind old host.

When the pickaninny, Sam, knocked at my door to tell me that dinner was served he found me prepared to do justice to anything in the way of food which might be placed before me. I had been traveling all day, to all intents and purposes without anything to eat. While anxious to satisfy my hunger, yet it was with some feeling of embarrassment that I started downstairs to meet the colonel. He met me at the foot of the steps and, motioning me to follow him, led me to a room in one of the side wings. There I saw two silver goblets, frosted on the outside, with their rims completely hidden by long and graceful bunches of mint. Without sitting down he handed me one and took the other himself.

"Of late years, Mr. Palmer," he said, "we have abandoned the time honored custom of drinking mint juleps before our dinner, but in order that you may feel perfectly at home and rest certain of the fact that I feel no resentment on account of your natural mistake, I have taken the liberty of asking you to join me in one of these, sir, holding the goblet as if pledging my health."

"This delicious fluid should be sipped only while sitting, but as the family is assembled for dinner I will ask you to forego the pleasure of a chat over our juleps and drink standing. I pledge your health, sir, and that of your kinsfolk, the friends of my young manhood."

It was the first julep I had ever tasted, and I shall never forget with what delicious force the straw threw the liquor against the roof of my mouth. The goblets were soon emptied, and I was ushered into the parlor, where we were evidently expected, for the occupants were standing.

"Mr. Palmer, let me present you to my wife, Mrs. Turpin; to my daughter, Ellen, and to my son, Howell Cobb, whom I hope you will soon address as Bud. Ellen, my dear, bid our guest, Mr. Palmer, welcome, for he is a kinsman of my old friends the Palmers of Kentucky, of whom you have so often heard me speak."

"Any friend whom my father brings to us is welcome, Mr. Palmer, but we make you doubly welcome on account of the ties which bind our house to yours."

She extended her hand, which I took and for the first time looked into that frank, open face. I did not think her beautiful then, but I was unprepared for the subtle ease and grace of manner and the exquisite poise of her head and the patrician face that was turned to me without any sign of embarrassment whatever. Her eyes were large and brown and her hands small and white. These were the only things about her that sank them into my memory.

"Mr. Palmer, father has taken us somewhat by surprise, and you must excuse many things, but we make you right welcome, and when you get tired of playing billiards with Ellen and talking politics with father I have a good dog and gun at your disposal."

The young man who was addressing me was tall and big, and when I had first entered I had mistaken him for a lubberly farm hand, but here he was, making me welcome with the ease of a courtier. Mrs. Turpin was a small, delicate looking woman, but was gown in a faded royal purple velvet, evidently the remnant of an anterior date.

"You young people can make plans at the table. In the meantime Ellen's roast is getting cold," said the colonel. Then I remembered about the cooking and thought for a moment what a sacrilege it would be to devour anything prepared by those lovely hands, but a sudden convulsive pang of hunger banished my sentimental thought, and I offered my arm gladly to Mrs. Turpin, while she led the way to the dining room. It was, in fact, an immense hall, wainscoted with oak, but the walls above the paneling were stained and, as far as I could see, even moldy. It was a gloomy looking place, but the table was made bright and cheerful by two big candlesticks. On the table was a profusion of dishes, some of which I had never seen before, but we made you right welcome, and when you get tired of playing billiards with Ellen and talking politics with father I have a good dog and gun at your disposal."

Please Kill That Fly!

HOUSEHOLDERS PLEASE READ BECAUSE

1. The fly is the most dangerous wild animal in America.
2. Flies breed in manure and other filth. Filth is the flies' food. Flies carry filth to our food.
3. Flies walk and feed on excreta and sputa from people ill with typhoid fever, tuberculosis, diarrhoeal affections and many other diseases.
4. One fly can carry and may deposit on our food 4,000,000 germs.

RULES FOR DEALING WITH THE FLY NUISANCE

Keep the flies away from the sick, especially those ill with contagious diseases. Kill every fly that strays into the sickroom. His body is covered with disease germs.

Do not allow decaying material of any sort to accumulate on or near your premises.

Screen all food and insist that your grocer, butcher, baker and every one from whom you buy foodstuffs does the same.

Don't buy foodstuffs where flies are tolerated.

Don't eat where flies have access to food.

Keep all receptacles for garbage carefully covered and the cans cleaned or sprinkled with oil or lime.

Keep all stable manure in vault or pit, screened or sprinkled with lime, oil or other cheap preparations, as 98 per cent of the flies come from stable manure and 2 per cent from garbage and other filth.

Keep the streets and alleys clean.

See that your sewage system is in good order; that it does not leak, is up to date and not exposed to flies.

Fear kerosene into the drains.

5. One fly in one summer may produce normally 195,312,500,000,000,000 descendants. Therefore kill the flies before they begin to breed.

6. A fly is an enemy to health, the health of our children, the health of our community!

A fly cannot develop from the egg in less than eight days. Therefore if we clean up everything thoroughly every week and keep all manure screened there need be no flies. Will you help in the campaign against this pest?

Burn pyrethrum powder in the house to kill the flies or use a mixture of formaldehyde and water, one spoonful to a quart of water. This exposed in the room will kill all the flies.

Burn or bury all table refuse.

Screen all windows and doors, especially in the kitchen and dining room.

If you see flies you may be sure that their breeding place is in nearby filth. It may be behind the door, under the table or in the cuspidor.

Remove all refuse and filth from house, yard and outhouses and thus prevent flies from breeding on your premises.

If there is no dirt and filth there will be no flies.

IF THERE IS A NUISANCE IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD WRITE AT ONCE TO THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

"Health is wealth," and "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

There is more health in a house well screened than in many a doctor's visit.

The only safe way is to keep out the flies.

The Kitchen Cupboard

WHEN MUTTON IS GOOD.

MUTTON is at its best in the fall, so it should have a prominent place on the bill of fare for fall and early winter. Many persons object to mutton because of its strong flavor, but if the fat is carefully cut off it will be deprived of this.

When you happen to be roasting mutton, if you place it upon a rack in the pan instead of allowing it to cook in the fat it will not be so strong. The outer skin should also be removed.

A leg of mutton is roasted or boiled, chops are broiled; the neck may be steamed, braised or boiled. The loin supplies cutlets or roast and the saddle is roasted. The neck may be used for stewing or making broth.

Roiled Loin.

Roiled loin of mutton is a doubly useful dish, as it may be served cold for the luncheon table. The butcher should be asked to take the bones off of the meat. Then shape the mutton into a neat roll. It may be stuffed if you choose with a plain bread stuffing.

Secure the roll with wooden skewers or sew up. Dredge with pepper, salt and flour. Place in the pan and roast, basting with bacon or salt pork drippings and water.

Mutton chops cooked in a casserole are delicious. The chops must be first seared in butter until they are a little brown. Then the casserole is arranged with a layer of onion, carrot and turnip cut in small slices and sautéed until light brown.

The mutton chop is now placed on this with water or stock to almost cover the vegetables. The chop is laid on top of the vegetables, the dish covered tightly and allowed to cook until well done.

Mutton Scallops.

Mutton scallops may be added to the bill of fare. Take half a pound of cold mutton, one ounce of butter, half an ounce of flour, half a pint of gravy, sauce or stock, a teaspoonful of chopped onion, salt, pepper and nutmeg to taste.

Well butter some scallop shells or minikins; chop the meat fine, melt half the butter in a small pan, stir in the flour, then add the stock or gravy. Stir this over the fire until it boils; season it carefully and add enough of it to the meat to moisten it well. Now stir in the chopped parsley and onion. Place the mixture in the buttered shells, shake a good layer of browned crumbs over the top of each. Put the shells on a baking tin in the oven till the mixture is hot through, then serve.

Verdi's Verdict.

At his home in Genoa, one evening in 1890, Verdi sat down to his piano and played some of the music from the score of "Cavalleria Rusticana." Boito and Tebalduini were present at the time. When the "grand old man" of music came to the end of the duet between Alfredo and Santuzza he cried out, "Enough of this sort of thing," and rose from the piano. Quite a long time afterward Mascagni heard the sequel to the incident. On the morning after it occurred Tebalduini met Verdi and remarked that the latter looked tired. Verdi explained that he had sat up to a very late hour of the night. "After you left," he went on, "I went back to the piano and once more tried over 'Cavalleria,' and it gradually conquered my prejudice and made a great impression on me. There is so much sincerity in its melodies that, in spite of myself, I could not help going on with it, and now I must admit that the work pleases me vastly." And he added, "Here is a young man who will make a name for himself."

Reason For Waiting.

A certain young woman, although she is a trained stenographer, typewriter and bookkeeper, had very bad luck in trying to obtain a position at even a fair salary. Though there was no joke in the continual disappointments, she found a funny side to her experience. The manager of a place whose advertisement she answered told her that the salary paid at first would be $3 a week, that by the end of the year it would be increased to $9, while by the third year she would receive the magnificent sum of $10. Mechanically she agreed to let him know and went out. Apparently she had made a good impression, for when a couple of days had gone by she received a note asking whether she wanted the position or not. She sat down and wrote: "Dear Sir—Of course I intended to accept the position; I am simply waiting for the two years to pass, so that I can begin at $10 per. Yours truly," New York Times.

Extirpating Our Wild Life.

The forces that are actively seeking to destroy all our best wild life are overwhelmingly numerous and very aggressive. Unfortunately each one of these forces of destruction is steadily becoming more deadly. I assert, without fear of contradiction, that today every valuable wild species in our country is being killed faster than it is breeding. In our own times the great auk, passenger pigeon, Labrador duck, Eskimo curlew, Carolina parakeet, flamingo (in the United States), Pallao's cormorant and the whooping crane have been completely exterminated. There are at least fourteen more species of birds that will be rendered extinct in the near future unless a revolution in public sentiment quickly and sternly stops the universal slaughter.—William T. Hornaday in Leslie's.

Noise in a Bank.

Banks were breaking in New York eight days at the height of the 1907 panic, and it was a nerve racking time. A new president had taken charge of one shaky institution to try to save it. He was a good natured man, but had a voice like the bellow of an angry bull. Unfamiliar with banking details, he was nosing around the place.

"Well, how much a day do you steal?" he belittled at a clerk who was emptying bags filled with gold and silver into a sorting and counting machine.

The clerk turned red, then white and stammered out some unintelligible reply.

The new president went back to his office, thought hard for ten minutes and then sent for the clerk. He confessed to a shortage of $7,500.—New York Mail.

The Roman Forum.

From the age of Tiberius to that of Constantine the history of the Roman forum is represented, says Professor Lanciani, by four great fountains followed by three great restorations. The first was that of Nero in 65. The second was that of Titus in 80. The third was in the reign of Commodus, 191. The fourth took place in 283, in the days of Carinus. A century later occurred the abolition of pagan worship, which is mentioned as the first incident in the destruction of the forum. Yet the place was in a tolerable degree of preservation as late as the beginning of the sixteenth century.

Sacrificed to Reform.

"You have abandoned the picturesque custom of crowning a queen of the May."

"Yes," replied the merry villager; "we had to give it up. There got to be so many candidates and so much campaigning that politics left us no time for business."—Washington Star.

Placing the Blame.

"I admit without hesitation," said the man who tries to conceal his self esteem, "that whatever I am today is due to the influence of my wife."

"That's right," replied Mr. Growcher. "Always blame the woman."—Washington Star.

Justified.

"The hour of 12 has struck," blazed the ghost, "and I have come back!" "I don't blame it," replied the materialist. "It was worked to death long ago."—Judge.

SPEED CRAZY.

We as a nation have gone speed crazy, and the railroads, against their better judgment, are putting on limited trains to meet the demands of those who would dart from city to city in what half a century ago would have seemed the twinkling of an eye. And the strange part of it is that the people most anxious to get to some place in a hurry are really in no hurry at all. More belong to the leisure than to the business class. Who pays the price for this speed? The engineer. Out of every hundred men who become firemen seventeen graduate to the freight locomotive cab; six live to haul passenger trains. If there is anything in Darwin's theory it is proved by the locomotive engineer. He is the survivor of the fittest, and you can't make him in a day.—Warren S. Stone, Chief of Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Maddening Rapid Transit.

The accommodation trains of Germany seldom fail to provoke the wrath of American travelers. One of them thus vented his feelings in a letter home:

"One morning I saw from the carriage window a square forty acre field of some unknown grain. It stretched for a quarter of a mile along the track, and we were just at the first quarter of it. A feeble old man with a reaping hook had begun at that corner to reap directly away from the track round the field. Calling out to him, I asked the name of the grain, but he was probably deaf and did not hear. I sat watching him awhile and then put my question to the passengers. I went to every one in the car, but no one could answer my question. However, with some inquiry served as an introduction, and I passed the day very pleasantly in conversation. Going toward evening, into the smoking compartment, I settled down to read a newspaper, and as the air was close I raised a window. A sharp sound of clashing steel struck my ears. I looked out. We had now arrived by a direct line at the far corner of the field. And the old man, having mowed along three sides, was there, whetting his blade."—Youth's Companion.

Preparing For the Wedding.

There was to be a wedding in eastern Kentucky. Many of the mountaineers would be there. Early in the morning of the nuptial day Bud Higgin was noticed filling an old No. 12 shoe with slugs and snails and plaster of paris.

"Wot you doin', Bud?" drawled Sim Deesley.

"Can't you see wot I'm doin'?" I'm makin' moonshine sperrits out'n cheese scrapin'."

Sim chuckled.

"Gettin' good an' ready fr th' wedding, I reckon."

"I reckon."

"Goin' to throw it at th' bridegroom, maybe?"

"Goin' to throw it at him, maybe, but it ain't goin' to hit him. It's goin' to break th' face of Snipe Tolliver an' do it accidental too. I been layin' fr that ther Snipe fr a right smart spell."

And he drove an extra railway spike in the hardening mass.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Powdering Closet.

When capricious fashion ruled that ladies should wear only white hair—the color supplied by nature being of no importance—the operation of putting on the powder made special arrangements necessary. These took the form of a special room or cabinet, and in every house of any pretension a small chamber was set aside for the exclusive use of powdering the hair. A curtain divided in the middle, a powdering stand to hold the bowl of powder and possibly a stool were all that the closet contained, and through the curtain the lady whose head was to be powdered protruded her head, the maid standing on the other side and "throwing" the powder at her head by means of a powder puff. To preserve the eyes and complexion a mask was held to the face. Unfortunately, no illustration of a "powdering closet" seems to have been preserved.—Courier de Louvres.

Why Lincoln Helped a Bug.

President Lincoln was walking with a friend about Washington and turned back for some distance to assist a beetle that had got on its back and lay on the walk, legs sprawling in air, vainly trying to turn itself over. The friend expressed surprise that the president, burdened with the cares of a warring nation, should find time to spare in assisting a bug.

"Well," said Lincoln, with that homely sincerity that touched the hearts of millions of his countrymen, "do you know that if I had left that bug struggling there on his back I wouldn't have felt just right. I wanted to put him on his feet and give him an equal chance with all the other bugs of his class."—Kansas City Star.

Cause For a Rebate.

A colored undertaker was requested to embalm the body of a colored man. The wife of the deceased asked what the cost would be. He named his usual charge, to which she quickly replied: "I think that's too much."

"But it is the regular fee," protested the undertaker.

"That may be," assented the widow, "but this ain't a regular corpse. My husband had a wooden leg."

The Family Skeleton.

"Pop, as boys is going to have a minstrel show."

"Yes, son."

"Well, can't we have the skeleton old Mrs. Gaddy says you've got in your closet to rattle the bones?"—Baltimore American.

A NEW REPORTER'S WORK.

The new reporter who wears a goatee and a billious complexion, was assigned to give an account of a swell reception the other evening. He has no dress suit and doesn't like social affairs anyhow and hence the following account which we believe shows more or less bias:

The social which the elite of Bligeville have looked forward to with much pleasurable anticipation, came off according to program last evening. We refer to the reception given by Mrs. Thomas McGinty of Balderdash Hall, in honor of Miss Gwendolyn Razorback of Chicago. We understand that over 250 invitations had been sent out, but there were 75 persons present and judging by outward appearances every one of them wished that there were only 74. Of course, Miss Razorback was supposed to be the belle of the ball, but we should be guilty of gross flattery if we suppressed the fact that she felt a long ways short of coming up to the specifications. Kitty Muldoon of Cayceport was there and outshone the Chicago lady as a high tension Tungsten cluster does up a tall dip. Miss Razorback sang a solo in a nasal voice that left no more to be desired after the first magnitude, but seldom hits anything but the high places, and when she warbled, "Oh come with me and be my love," all of the Bligeville bachelors made a break for the door. When the tumult and the instrumental selections followed more or less dreadful, but not quite up to the awfulness of the performance of the lady from Chicago. A young woman wearing her hair red and encased in a décollete tea gown that fitted her like a gunny sack, attacked the piano in a fine frenzy and evoked a noise like a boiler factory zone wrong. After she had played for thirty minutes by the town clock, an escaped lunatic from Jonesboro clapped his hands once or twice and the young woman turned on the discord again for a long period. Luncheon was served under the spreading chestnut tree in the back yard and when the ceremony was over the Countess quartet sang sweetly "Oh Wasn't It Awful, Mabel!"

GLENDAL, CAL., JULY 5, 1912

The NEWS is a believer in true progress, but political "progression" has been used so long as a sweet-smelling bait with which to catch votes that our faith in it has reached the vanishing point. It should not be sufficient to allege that one is a "Progressive" to obtain the support of an intelligent constituency, and the people will be wise in demanding that candidates for office bring forth more than empty assertions about "the rights of the people" before they give such would-be candidates their support.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

History seems to prove that a power outside of the wisdom of man controls the destinies of nations and it is unlikely that this self-evident fact is going to have an exception in the story of the twentieth century when it shall be told. Consequently the philosopher finds no reason to despair over the present condition of political affairs in the United States. The unphilosophical pessimist who is wedded to the belief that the elevation of any one man to a high place or the putting into effect of any particular theory of government, is essential to our welfare, should take himself less seriously and be willing to leave something to Providence. These philosophical remarks are inspired by the present mixed political condition of affairs in this country. The two principal political parties have named their candidates for the presidency and adopted their platforms. Another party is promised by an aggregation that assumes to believe that they are responsible for the salvation of the country; the Socialists, the Prohibitionists and some more of various persuasions are still to be heard from. We have expressed previously our opinion of the Republican nomination to the effect that it is good enough for us. The Democrats have nominated a scholar and a gentleman for president, whether he is a statesman is a matter for legitimate debate. The other nominations shall have our attention when made. Meanwhile we wish to assure the pessimist of whatever persuasion that this is a pretty good old world after all, and if he disputes it, we can afford to let him enjoy that high privilege.

THE WATER QUESTION.

The NEWS hopes that Mr. L. C. Brand will not withdraw his offer to sell to the city of Glendale the Miradero Water Company at an appraised valuation of $28,500 including nearly 500 ten-thousands of the water of Verdugo Canon. The delay on the part of the city does not imply rejection and the offer is such an eminently fair one that we can not believe that it is the intention of the people to reject it. Mr. Lynch, who has gone into the matter thoroughly, estimates that the plant would pay for itself in about seven years. If it took longer than this, it would still be a very attractive business proposition. It is very desirable that the city of Glendale become owner of as much of the local water supply as can be procured at a reasonable figure, and certainly the sum of $1500 an inch is a very fair valuation. Put against the estimated cost of Owens river, it is remarkably cheap. An impression seems to prevail in some quarters that the local water companies are anxious to sell out to the city. The contrary is nearer the truth. There are six or seven water companies supplying water to Glendale and vicinity, of these the Miradero is the only one that has showed any desire or willingness to sell. Mr. Brand expects to come into control of the Consolidated Company and has expressed a willingness if he does so to sell it to the city on terms similar to those offered on the Miradero. Three of the other companies are mutual affairs, all of which have passed through the difficult period of their existence and are now on a good paying basis, with no expressed anxiety on the part of any of them to part with their property. Another idea seemingly prevalent is that the advent of Owens river water will cheapen local supplies. This cer-

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

We are getting a good many things refined out of us in these early years of the twentieth century, and among other old-fashioned habits that are passing away, is that of the celebration of the Fourth of July. Quite possibly we never did celebrate it in a manner that was perfectly sane, but we believe that even the crudity of it got results. There was merit in the big noise, the flamboyant patriotic speeches and the blare of the band.

Noise appeals powerfully to the attention, it stimulates inquisitiveness and when the child or the newly arrived immigrant heard the explosion of powder in its varied forms, he naturally asked, "What does it mean," and there was ever at hand some one well enough informed to tell him.

Thus the noise became a powerful agency for the teaching of this bright chapter in the history of the United States. Possibly some better way may be devised for keeping green the memory of the men and the time that gave us a nation, but at present the iconoclasts have broken down our idols and now we fear that the demagogues are determined to break down our ideals. The constitution of the United States was a product of the combination of great minds inspired by a love of country and guided by a profound knowledge of the history of the race and of the weaknesses of human nature. It was not made for a nation under certain conditions only, it was turned out a finished product upon which to rear and maintain a state. It was framed wisely in that the machinery necessary to bring about changes in the instrument was made unwieldy and slow of action, and in no other detail was the great wisdom of the fathers of the republic more clearly shown. They knew that the people of a republic need to be on guard against themselves, and they framed the constitution so that it could not be made the football of the opportunist and the demagogue, but could only be changed after a period of due deliberation. The republic should see to it that the great achievements of its founders should be kept green in the memory of its citizens and the natal day of the nation should not be permitted to pass without a demonstration of the patriotic spirits of the people who in the "piping days of peace" are reaping the fruits of the seed that their forefathers sowed in the days that tried the souls of men!

Miss Myrtle and Miss Emma P. Williams entertained at dinner Sunday evening in their home on Kenwood street.

AFTERMATH OF THE CROCKER CASE

Dr. Crocker to the Public

As we went to press last week the jury had just brought in its verdict which was as follows:

"We, the jury in the above mentioned case, regularly impaneled and sworn, having heard the evidence in the case, find the defendant guilty on the following charge, to-wit, of furnishing, distributing and dividing alcoholic liquors to her guests." The court had instructed the jury that they were not required to find the defendant guilty on all the charges but should render a verdict of guilty if they believed any single charge proved and that they were not to let their opinion of the law influence their verdict, as they were not called upon to pass upon its constitutionality or otherwise. As the ordinance covers every possibility of possession, giving, serving, dividing, transporting or having anything to do with alcoholic, spirituous or malt liquors, the jury had no alternative but to find guilty, although it is said that on the first polls they stood a majority for acquittal.

When the defendant appeared for sentence Saturday morning, City Attorney Evans stated that he would request the court to impose a modified sentence if defendant would promise that conditions complained of at her place, should no longer exist. This promise was given and the judge imposed a sentence to pay a fine of $150. On Sunday Dr. Crocker appeared at the residence of Recorder Whomes Miller of Los Angeles who on Sunday had been found by him entertaining a party of friends at Verdugo Park and swore out a complaint against C. with beer, among other refreshments. The doctor had tried to persuade the party to give or sell him some of the beer, but ineffectually. The accused was represented before the court Monday morning by his attorney and the case will be tried Saturday morning. In publishing the following communication from Dr. Crocker this paper does not, of course, either approve or disapprove of its expressions.

ON OPEN LETTER.

To Glendale citizens:
For over four years a stringent city ordinance prohibiting the possession, distribution or giving away of any and all kinds of alcoholic beverages has slept on the book of the city clerk. No effort has been made to enforce it.

For over four years the various brewery wagons have made regular bi-weekly trips delivering beer to Glendale homes.

An organization of prominent citizens has maintained elegant quarters where "cave privileges" may be enjoyed by "members and their guests." The regular government retail liquor dealer's license is issued to this association, thus amply proving that liquor is actually sold.

Picnic parties have been enjoyed at beautiful Verdugo Park, lasting far into the night and usually on Sundays. Liquor and beer have been freely distributed, and in such an atmosphere the boys and girls of Glendale have attended the regular Sunday ball game which is conducted as a profitable business by a city officer.

Such are the conditions which have existed in Glendale for over four years and still exist. No attempt was made to enforce an ordinance which has been violated by probably half the citizens of Glendale.

Suddenly the deputy marshal becomes active. He has never been able to find liquor in the thickly settled portion of Glendale, or at his Verdugo Park ball game. He has never been able to see the brewery wagons, but in order to make an arrest, he must come to my ranch home, three miles from the city hall and one mile beyond his ball park. At my house he finds a party of friends enjoying music and dancing. He peeps under a window shade and sees my wife passing a tray of refreshments to her guests. Such a terrible violation of a sacred city law! She must be a desperate criminal! He will need help to make the arrest, so he hurries back and reports to the chief of police. After consultation, these two decide they cannot safely arrest one small woman, so they enlist the aid of a special officer. Thus reinforced, they return to my home, enter without warrant, arrest my wife and confiscate a few bottles of beer and some brandied cherries. No complaint was made and no warrant issue before the arrest. We could get no information of the charge until some time later. Perhaps you can imagine our indignation when we found that the chief of police swore that my wife was keeping a place where liquor was sold and where people caroused. No charge was made that the liquor was given away, and we therefore pleaded "not guilty" and prepared to endure the unpleasantness of a trial.

The testimony of both officers proved conclusively that no liquor was sold and that there was no boisterous conduct or carousing, and yet the chief of police swore in the complaint that my wife was guilty of all these things.

After a rather tempestuous trial, in which several puerile and ridiculous attempts were made to influence the jury, by assailing the character of my wife, a very fair verdict was rendered which cleared her absolutely of all the false charges. It was the only verdict possible under the ordinance: "Guilty of dividing and distributing liquor to her guests." Hospitality is a crime in Glendale!

We are entirely satisfied with the verdict and regard it as a complete vindication. We thank the jury.

We are not satisfied with the extreme penalty imposed by the court, believing it out of all proportion to the slight offense. We shall carry the matter to a higher tribunal.

Now the question is, How much longer are the people of Glendale going to be liable to arrest for the most simple act of hospitality? Who is safe from an officer who can see liquor through a window curtain but not at his Sunday ball game? What lady is safe from arrest should she offer callers a piece of cake, with a glass of wine or beer?

The chief of police may swear that she sold the liquor and her guests were "carousing."

Just a few words more. On each of the Sundays just past, a demand was made of the deputy marshal that he arrest people in Verdugo Park who were openly distributing liquor. He could not see those violations of the law (perhaps because no window curtain intervened) and refused to make an arrest even when shown the liquor, the mere possession of which is a crime in Glendale. Upon the second refusal of this officer to do his duty, the writer made a tiresome trip to Judge Whomes's house, explained the situation and secured a warrant, which was given the deputy marshal, and the arrest reluctantly made. Compare this with the procedure when my wife was arrested. Then no warrant was necessary and no complaint was made until after the arrest. I ask you—is it fair?

Perhaps the same offense at night in one's private residence is worse than on Sunday afternoon at the ball game, where the boys and girls of Glendale are assembled. Perhaps the beer wagon is not visible as it makes its rounds. (Its sides are draped with curtains, but not like those on my windows.) Some of us must entertain our friends at home in the good old-fashioned way, not at a favored club.

This case is just begun. So long as we can afford the fight, we will carry it on, and there will be others to take it up, until some day we hope to secure an amended liquor ordinance, giving citizens of Glendale the privilege of extending hospitality in their homes, secure from the chief of police and safe from an officer who can only see clearly at night and through a window curtain.

We do not want saloons or public drinking, but we do want personal privilege, and we believe that such is the desire of the majority of our citizens.

Miss Ruth Egan's class won the banner, a beautiful American flag, for having the largest attendance at the meeting last Tuesday evening. 78 per cent is certainly a good record, of which the young ladies may well feel proud.

The Sunday evening stereopticon talks will be of special interest. Dates and subjects as follows: July 7th, "Life of John Bunyan" (not illustrated); July 21st, "Pierim and his Burden" (illustrated); July 28th, "Beelzebub's Poisoned Arrows" (illustrated); August 4th, "Variety Fair" (illustrated); August 11th, "The Celestial City" (illustrated).

The pastor has also secured a beautiful set of colored slides which will be appreciated by all who see them.

VAUDEVILLE AT THORNYCROFT FARM.

Thursday evening of last week the guests at Thornycroft Farm and a large number of the neighbors were treated to an open-air vaudeville performance in front of the house, where a stage had been erected, seats provided and all arrangements made by Mrs. H. L. Miller for the entertainment of the large company assembled to enjoy the generous program. The lawn comprised a portion of the auditorium, while banked up on the edge of the street outside were a large number of automobiles filled with guests who appreciated the brilliant moonlight, the soft atmosphere of June, the delightful surroundings and the following program, nearly every feature of which won an encore:

Pauline Mathie, dance, "Spring Song."
Joe DeGrasse and Ida May Park, balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet."

H. T. Glass, Roman rings.

Haniard and Goodwin, piano and songs.

William Ream, black face artist.
Augusta Von Salven, vocalist.
Elmira Blaisdell, violin.

Senorita Sepulveda, Spanish dance and "La Paloma."

Dr. Bachman was the efficient stage director.

ALL DONE IN THREE MONTHS.

Among comparatively new arrivals in Glendale are Major Nat Brown and family, who came from Los Angeles about two months ago and located on Sycamore street, near the West Glendale school house. Major Brown has been a resident of California for something like forty years. He is proudly proud of the record of things accomplished in home building in a space of about three months. In that time he has erected a neat six-room modern cottage with all up-to-date conveniences, built very complete henneries stocked with a choice collection of Ancona thoroughbred fowls of all ages, including five-month-old laying pullets, and found time to make a fine garden. He is now eating potatoes the seed for which was put in the ground two months ago.

Brown has a fine collection of pedigree Angora cats, beautiful specimens of that comparatively rare breed.

PINK TEA PARTY.

Thursday afternoon the pretty home of Miss George Duff at 1008 Chestnut street was the scene of a merry crowd of young girls who gathered to congratulate Miss Ducet on her recent graduation. A pleasant hour was spent over needlework, followed by music and games, after which the party adjourned to the lawn, where a number of pictures were taken. Upon returning to the house, tea was served in the dining room, lovely in its decorations of summer blossoms. Quantities of Pink Ramblers covered the white cloth in an effective manner. Guests of the afternoon were Miss Mable Evans, Miss Emily Elias, Miss Myrtle Pulliam, Miss Emma Pulliam, Miss Ruth Brown, Miss Alpha Clement and Miss Pearl Goode.

RECEPTION AND BANQUET IN HONOR OF MISSIONARIES.

An unusually large banquet was held Monday evening in Hamburger's Cafe in honor of Dr. Dye, Mr. Cory, Mr. Cunningham and Mr. Shelton, returned missionaries from Africa, China and Japan. Following an elaborate course banquet, a reception was held, during which interesting addresses were delivered by the honor guests. A number of Glendale residents were present, among them, Reverend and Mrs. Utter, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Heacock, Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Kilborn, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. C. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Maxwell, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Learned, Mr. and Mrs. J. Musser, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Shropshire.

INDEPENDENCE DAY PICNIC LUNCHEON.

Mrs. Menzo Williams of North Central avenue, assisted by her daughters, Miss Nellie and Miss Emma Williams, presided at a delightful luncheon party held at their home on Thursday.

Luncheon was served out of doors beneath a large, spreading umbrella tree. Attractive decorations of flags and other appropriate Fourth of July emblems were prettily arranged. Immense bowls of cut flowers were a dainty touch. Covers were laid for twenty guests, a number of whom were from out of town.

Malignant Unbelief. Mark III:20-35.
Golden Text—This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil.
John III:19.

(1.) Verses 20-21—Why did the relatives of Jesus think he was beside himself?

(2.) Why does a state of intense religious experience still impress the average man as insanity?

(3.) If the preachers who are indicted with empty pews should become intensely spiritual what effect, if any, would that have upon the size of their congregations?

(4.) Verse 22—Where is the scene of this lesson laid?

(5.) Are Christians who earn their living by teaching religion liable to backslide in their own souls? Give your reasons.

(6.) What reason had these scribes to think that Jesus was possessed with the devil and cast out devils by his power?

(7.) What is that dangerous and subtle power in human nature which enables a man to believe almost anything in the line of his interests or prejudices?

(8.) Verses 23-26—Why may not Satan cast out a small demon in order to make way for a bigger one?

(9.) These scribes admitted the fact of Christ's wonderful miracles; why, therefore, and by what power were they performed?

(10.) Why is it that so many men, in spite of the fact that Christ's claim is so well established, continue to make such foolish attacks on Christ-ianity?

(11.) How do you account for those scribes making such a foolish statement that Christ cast out devils by the power of Beelzebub? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(12.) Verse 27—What does Christ propose to do with the devil ("the strong man") in so far as the individual Christian is concerned?

(13.) Verses 28-30—In what respect could this sin of the scribes be called a sin against the Holy Ghost?

(14.) If a man sins against light, knowledge, and continues to reject the only way of salvation, why is it impossible for him to be forgiven?

(15.) As it applies to sinners today, what would you say is the sin against the Holy Ghost which never can be forgiven?

(16.) Verses 31-35—What would you think Christ's brethren and his mother wanted of him?

(17.) If our most loved friends after the flesh want to keep us back from intense spiritual work, what should be our attitude to them?

(18.) Which relations are the holier and happier and why, those after the flesh or those after the spirit?

First, That that portion of Vine Street from the West line of Central Avenue to the Easterly line of San Fernando Road, including all intersections of streets, be graded and oiled in accordance with plans and profile on file in the office of the City Engineer and specifications for the grading and oiling of streets on file in the office of the City Clerk of the City of Glendale, said specifications being numbered 10,
excepting that in addition to said specifications No. 10 there shall be incorporated into the roadway a layer of gravel two and one-half (2½) inches thick in the center tapering uniformly to a thickness of one inch at the curb line, of which the maxi-said street so proposed to be improved, as hereinafter set forth, including the cost of intersection work assessable upon said frontage; and said Board of Trustees determines that serial bonds shall be issued to represent the cost of said work or improvement; said serial bonds shall be extended over a period ending nine (9) years from and after the second day of January next succeeding the date of said bonds, and an even annual proportion of the principal sum thereof shall be payable by coupon on the 2nd day of January every year after their date until the whole is with the provisions of an Act of the Legislature of the State of California, entitled, "An Act to provide a system

TO BUILD ADDITION TO CHURCH.

Rev. C. B. Hatch reported this week that his church had raised a sum of $1090, which will be used in the erection of a bungalow building to be known as the social hall of the church. To this amount the presbytery committee has guaranteed in addition a sum of $1000, which will also be put in the building. The presbytery has heard with enthusiasm of the earnest and preserving work of this congregation and has assured the pastor of its unanimous support. As soon as the gift of the $1000 has been received work on the new building will be started.

The present crowded condition of the building at the Sabbath services will be at least temporarily relieved. The new addition to the church will accommodate the Sunday school and social work for years to come. Special class rooms and other apartments required by modern church methods will be provided. Among the most earnest advocated in the interest of the church is Rev. W. E. Edmonds, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Glendale, who is hand in hand in promoting the work in this field. In the endowment of Occidental College this church gave the largest amount in proportion to its size, the amount being more than $1200.
